

From the Chairman's Desk – Towards Promising Vistas

Let us (students, teachers, parents, management) together share the efforts to enrich the environments of the school where the young minds would inhale the flavour of flowering their dreams : to accomplish greatness in their choicest fields. In this regard, with deep interest and rigorous efforts of Prof. Swapan, Director, Department of Chemistry, Bard College, USA, a partnership between Bard College and Peace Public School has been established. Mr. Stephen Tremaine, Vice President, Bard Early College Network, USA along with Dr. Swapan visited Peace Public School in January and spent almost a week to study the suitability of partnership between Bard and PPS. Finally the great news in Dr. Swapan's words is being quoted below :

"Bard College (USA) and Peace Public School (India) have established an academic partnership. Founded in 1865, Bard is a leading private college of the liberal arts and sciences, located in New York State. In addition to its picturesque main campus sprawling over 1000 acres in the Hudson Valley region of New York, Bard leads an international network of early college schools and partnerships. These early college programs bring rigorous, rewarding, and intellectual inspiring college coursework to ambitious young people who are high school-aged. Through the partnership between Bard and Peace Public School (PPS), students and faculty at Peace and at Bard will share academic resources and foster international exchange. Bard College and PPS seek to explore various academic partnership activities which includes teacher training and professional development, student exchange programming, and Bard-led summer programming in writing, thinking, and Language for the students."

Summer Program in Writing, Thinking, and Language, 2019

A promising three-week Summer Program in Writing, Thinking, and Language has been arranged for the selected students of 10th, 11th, and 12th class, which will be led by Prof. Anna Dolan. Modelled after the innovative three-week Language and Thinking workshop required of all students entering Bard College, students in this workshop will explore a range of texts from a variety of disciplines, in order to develop their critical thinking skills, formal academic essay composition and more playful and personal exploratory writing. This year the workshop's content will be focused around human aggression and empathy, drawing upon such writers as Freud, Einstein, Gandhi, Darwin and contemporary commentators on Darwin's ideas on human primate aggression, ethics and collaboration. These texts will challenge and strengthen students' written and verbal language skills across multiple genres. There will be in-class discussion and writing to investigate assigned texts – the emphasis will not be upon arriving at a "correct answer" but on exploring various useful ideas about what a text is saying and implying. Texts also serve as starting points and models for students own writing exercises. Daily activities are complemented by evening assignments in reading, writing and revising. Each week students will develop a portfolio of works in progress, for individual feedback.

The summer program would be from June 12 - July 3.

ODYSSEY

Life, the biggest gift it is for everyone,
But beware,
To live it, in itself is the world's biggest dare,
Heir to it everyone is,
So no one has the right to deprive you of it.

Greatest Odyssey life is,
So do not take it lightly,
Lest it will be your biggest folly.

Some say life is not fair,
Others who do not think so, brace up,
For they are right there.

A gift bestowed upon us it is,
A beautiful gift,
A gift which has to be returned when the time comes,
For every good thing has an end.

It will be taken,
When the time comes,
When, where, how,
That we can't tell for now.

It does not matter when it comes,
Or how,
What matters is how we define our life,
Before we arrive at, and cross over that point of no return.

Life is like a mountain,
As you go ahead, it gets dangerous and it gets bumpy,
You will get tired,
But its worth that beauty.

World is like space,
Shine like a star, so that you don't fade
away,
There is no destiny, which

Dream

Dream is what is born to come true
It has nothing with mind to do Dream is what is limitless Not doubted until and unless

Dream big at nights
and pursue it during days Target the heights and work hard without any delays

Don't permit your dream to shrink at any cost Because your dream has to be ranked the utmost Don't sanction your feet to rest
Because they are meant to achieve the best

Big aspirations enable caged birds to fly and slaves to break the chains whereby Low ambitions can mark only ceilings, Whereas high aspirations can finish all sufferings

Keep your dreams in eyes and let them flood

I ponder about the upward population

I am obsessed with the constitution of

MOTIVE OF LIFE

Today, I asked myself,
What's the motive of life?

And my room replied,
"Roof" said: Think high,
"Fan" said: Keep your brain cool,
"Calendar" said: Always be with time,
"Mirror" said: Look at yourself,
"Clock" said: Time is precious,
"Wallet" said: Save for future,
Then I looked at my blanket,
"Blanket" said:
Sleep is necessary,
But to achieve something,
We need to lose something.

THE CHERRY BLOSSOM

Standing aloof from nature, in senility,
Bare and lifeless the cherry tree,
Craving for its friends' blooming,
and awaiting the long lost spring.

The day it was born,
its life it couldn't apprehend,
never knew the autumn wouldn't be its end, because the nights would be longer for a few,
and then it will shine like new.

At last, swaying in the winter breeze,
Its pinks and whites in freeze,
With its full bloom in January,
Embracing the wonderful Mount Fuji

The tender shoots blessing your head, the blowing spirit taking the blooms ahead Welcoming you by soothing your kimono, and entertaining you by the windy show.

Enhancing the dumplings and rice ball, cherished by one and all,
each blossom attracts like

FROM A STUDENT'S POINT OF VIEW

PEER TALK – TIME MANAGEMENT

What is time management? Why would you want to spend your day studying when you could be playing a game or watching movies?

All I'm saying, my lovely schoolmates, is that follow my advice and you won't be stressed beyond reason at the time for your finals, and when the time for your results comes? Let's just say these tips may be able to save you from hours of lectures given by parents and teachers alike.

- 1) Do your homework! This is quite possibly the most important tip on here. Teachers give homework for a reason and if you do it regularly, chances are that you will understand the lesson and it will actually generate your interest and you will want to study.
- 2) Revise what has been done in class. This one is pretty simple. Set 2-3 hours a day to study and read over what has been done in class. You will most likely absorb the knowledge and be so thankful when you give exams.
- 3) All work and no play makes it a bad day. Studies are important but they are not everything! Mental health is crucial and the key to staying happy. Try finding a good stress buster. This can range from board games and to exercise.
- 4) Find a safe space. I will not lie to you. Sometimes things can get hard and it is very important to find a person you can trust and talk to. This may be your parents, a teacher, the school counselor or a good friend.
- 5) Prioritize your studies. If you study 8 hours a day, but you're studying a
